About Sister Cities

NACTO Sister Cities Roadshows bring together mid- and smaller-sized cities to share lessons and experiences through peer-to-peer presentations and technical trainings allowing cities to work together to expand best practices for bikeway design across the country. Open to NACTO Affiliate Members as well as non-member cities, Sister Cities Roadshows are attended by both city staff and local advocates.

A typical Sister City Roadshow is a two-day event, encompassing short peer-to-peer presentations, a NACTO Urban Bikeway Design Training, an infrastructure tour, a bikeway design charrette, vendor product demos, and a networking social event. Five to seven sister cities, three to five vendors, a local bicycling advocate organization, and NACTO staff typically participate. Sister Cities Roadshows allow city staff to connect with their counterparts from peer cities while learning about NACTO member benefits, bikeway design guidance, and the latest products offered by sponsoring vendors.
